

5 Ways to Fast-Track YOUR Success

	Identify the success you want. Do you want to get more clients, earn more money, get a promotion, or build your business? Be really specific about what you want AND the time you want to achieve this in. Then write this down and share it with someone. Once we state our intentions to both ourselves and others we commit to them in a different way, a more wholehearted way. It's like we are saying watch me – look what I am going to do instead of secretly thinking
	Believe YOU can be successful. This is possibly the single most common factor that absolutely sabotages the success of millions of people. You need to start thinking that YOU can be successful – if you have an internal voice that says you can't, then develop a success mantra AND USE IT – for example “I can be successful” repeat it to yourself as often as you need to and certainly whenever you hear an internal voice saying you can't.
	See opportunities. Many people say they want success but somehow walk around with their eyes fixed firmly to the floor and refuse to notice the opportunities that exist for promotion, or business start-up or growth. Believing you can be successful will often mean that you are open to opportunities. Yes there may be some risk involved but that is part of the success journey
	Get the right habits. This is an extreme example but imagine someone saying they want to be successful but actually they sleep till 10am every day, rarely exercise, eat junk food all day and are drunk every night, how would you rate their chances of success? Yes, I know it is extreme, but success takes work, it involves effort. Sure there may be payback later but take a look at your habits? Are they the kind of habits that will lead to success? You need to be honest with yourself and if you spot things that need changing then you need to change them. For many people success involves hard work, risk and commitment. Things like reading books to gain information might help develop a success mind set. Setting priorities and committing to achieve them, dairying time to make sure you get important tasks completed can also help. Some habits definitely make success easier to achieve than others.
	Invest - Just Do It! So you want success. Well, most things in life that are of value involve investment. That means investment of time, effort, possibly courage and usually some money. Many people want to achieve success but seem unprepared to invest anything themselves. Success might mean coming home and then completing some online training, or working in your own business after a day at work, perhaps having to face your fear of sales, or public speaking and almost all business will involve investment of some money. BUT this is positive – after all we only invest in things we value. If you want to be successful and value that then you will find the time, effort, courage or commitment you need to invest to gain that success.
